Rose Bush Is 58 Years Old

(International News Service) LANSDOWNE. JUN 19.--A 58year-old rose bush that bloomed from a "stick" planted in the ground the prized possession of Horace Batierali.

As a boy Haffeigh noticed a thorny branch in his back yard in Philadelphia and idly stuck it in "he ground. The "stick" took root and grew into a fourishing rose Since then it has accompanied the family in each move to a new location, and it still blooms. The average life of a rose bash is 10 to 20 years, a Lansdowne florist said, adding that he had never beard before of a bush that smylved two transplantings,
